

Department of Educational Studies, Goldsmiths, University of London

PhD Completions since 2001

Success in Diversity: Culture, Knowledge and Learning in Ethnically-Diverse Primary Classrooms. Jean Conteh, (2001).

The monkey's mask: identity, memory, narrative and voice, Chris Kearney, (2001).

The impact of action research on practitioners' thinking: a supporting case for action research as a method of professional development, Janet Rose, (2001).

The role of secondary school chairs of governors in everyday governance, Michael Watson, (2002).

Student teachers' beliefs about science, design & technology: influences on planning for activities in the primary classroom, Daniel Davies, (2002).

Pedagogical implications of hermeneutical philosophy in education, William Taft (2002).

Text and Context: Developing Literacy in a New Language through Children's Literature. A Comparative Study, Aura Mor-Sommerfeld Israel, (2002).

"It's not just what I say, it's also how I say it" : bilingual performance, the interpersonal dimension, Hayat Al-Khatib, (2003).

Consuming Guinness, producing Irishness: circuits of cultural production, Brenda Murphy, (2003).

Telling choices: an exploration of the gender imbalance in participation in advanced mathematics courses in England, Heather Mendick, (2004).

Young Bilingual Children Learning at Home and at School, Rosemary Drury, (2004).

The negotiation of equality of opportunity for emergent bilingual children in the English mainstream classroom, Yangguang Chen, (2004).

Portuguese Students in London Schools: Patterns of participation in community language classes and patterns of educational achievement, Olga Barradas, (2004).

Early Literacy in Parallel Literacy Classes: Young bilingual children learning to read in English, Urdu and Classical Arabic, Leena Robertson, (2004).

Teachers' perspectives on training to teach class music to children in the age range 7 to 11 years in England Heather Brewer, (2005).

Teaching the holocaust in history: policy and classroom perspectives, Lucy Russell, (2005).

Towards a creative Early Childhood program in Zhuhai and Macau, the People's Republic of China, Keang-Ieng (Peggy) Vong, (2005).

Sculpture and autism: a study of the engagement of pupils with autism and the sculpture collection commissioned for their residential school, Jan Osborne, (2006).

Teaching in multicultural societies: the theories and practice of teachers in Greek community schools, Efstathia Pantazi, (2006).

The Role of Culture in Second Language Learning with Special Reference to the Japanese Students at the International School of Dusseldorf, Germany, Patricia Mertin, (2006).

Community education for peace-building in Northern Ireland: key enabling factors, Peter Mangan, (2006).

English primary children learning foreign languages at home and at school: A socio-cultural approach to the development of language learning strategies, Claudine Kirsch, (2006).

Positioning masculinities and femininities in preschool EFL education, Harold Castaneda, (2007).

Why stop having fun?: drinking and smoking as ways of 'doing' girl, Fiona Cullen, (2007).

Inspection and performativity: life after special measures, Jane Perryman, (2007).

Facing change: understanding reactions to ICT adoption in teaching English for Specific Purposes at King Abdulaziz University, Badia Hakim, (2007).

African Caribbean pupils in Art Education, Paul Dash, (2008).

Literacy as Social and Cultural Practice in an Urban Community: Self, Solidarity and Status, Clare Kelly, (2008).

Living Through Ambiguity. The Cross-Cultural Experiences of Chinese Students in London, Hong Ding, (2009).

Mind the Gap! Children's Domestic Writings and their implications for educational practice, Joan Travers Simon (aka Joan Bursch), (2009).

"Boys are from Planet Football?" Girls are from Planet Pink?": Gender dualism and beyond in the construction of young children's gender identities in the early years of schooling, Barbara Martin, (2009).

English in Japan: Conceptualisations of English and English Education in Japanese Educational and Social Contexts, Ayako Shibata, (2009).

How do Nursery Nurses working in Day nurseries Interpret the 'Early Learning Goals', Helen Richardson, (2009).

A Clumsy encounter: The Dyspraxic Ideal meets Drawing from Observation as an Official and Discriminatory Discourse, Clare Penketh, (2010).

Girlhood, sport and physical activity: the construction of young femininities in the transition to secondary school, Sheryl Clarke, (2010).

Bombing of Poems: Poetics of a plural event, Christobal Bianchi, (2010).

The meanings of inclusion in cross-cultural contexts: Exploring the experiences of adult learners and teachers in two FE colleges in the London area, John Igbinomwanhia, (2010).

TEO - The role and function of an oral text editor in language learning in a multilingual context, Gerard Gretsch, (2011).

Artist teacher identities: An autobiographical exploration of gendered identity construction, Wendy Hyde, (2011).

The causes and effects of permanent exclusion from school: Policy and practice in an urban children's services department, Anna Carlile, (2011).

The development of a Br-Islamic identity: third generation Bangladeshis from East London, Aminul Hoque, (2011).

How might the Twi language act as mediator of learning in primary schools in Ghana? Amoafi Kwapong, (2011).

Looking for a subject: art therapy and assessment in autism. Robin Anthony Tipple (2011)