Programme overview

MFA in Curating is a programme designed to develop professional and academic excellence in the field of contemporary curatorial practice. The programme is designed for students who wish to take up the challenge of contemporary curating as an artistic, social and critical undertaking, and who wish to develop their professional practice in this area. Situated within the Department of Art, the programme draws on the international scope of contemporary arts practice at Goldsmiths and in London and instigates debate about the relationship between that practice, current critical dismodule and concepts of curating. MFA in Curating is designed for curators and those with related academic and practical experience who wish to achieve professional excellence in their practice, to innovate in the expanding field of curatorial practice. The programme achieves this by subjecting the construction of curatorial projects, the ideas and concepts involved, to aesthetic and critical scrutiny. MFA in Curating at Goldsmiths focuses in-depth on aesthetic, social, political and philosophical questions that are brought to bear in any place or at any event in which contemporary art is situated. MFA in Curating is designed to provide a practice-led research space for students at any stage of their professional practice. The programme enables scholars and practitioners to experiment and innovate in the expanded field of curatorial pedagogy, to collaborate on an interdisciplinary basis and extend their and others knowledge through this process.

The programme develops students’ curatorial skills through lectures, seminars, tutorials and site visits and places a strong emphasis on student-centred learning. Each year students carry out a self-organised Independent Research Project and a written essay as well as regularly participating in lecture series, reading groups, gallery and other site visits, discussions with visiting professionals and seminar presentations. MFA in Curating focuses on the links between critical interests and practice and provides a pedagogical framework to enable students to integrate these two elements into their work through the parallel and joint development across the programme. Students’ writing is developed to professional standard across the programme in a number of ways, including critical studies and catalogue essays, weekly reviews and written presentations.
Programme entry requirements

Diploma stage
Applicants for Full-time Year 1 (or part-time equivalent): first degree of at least second class (or international equivalent) plus element of professional experience (interning in gallery or equivalent institution, developing self-generated projects, curating own shows or degree shows etc.). Students will be asked to attend interview where appropriate.
Students who successfully complete Full-time Year 1 proceed onto Full-time Year 2 (or part-time equivalent)

Masters stage
Students who successfully complete full-time Year One of the programme may proceed onto full-time Year Two; students who complete part time Year Two may proceed to part time Years Three and Four. Students may only be directly admitted into full time Year Two or part time Year Three if they have successfully completed the equivalent CATS value (120 CATS) at a higher education institution recognised by Goldsmiths. This means having successfully completed the first year of a full time MFA Programme or the first two years of a Part Time MFA programme in another recognised MFA Programme.

Applicants come from around the world, from diverse cultural backgrounds and experiences. We actively encourage these applications as well as those from mature learners who wish to broaden their creative knowledge base in the belief that the academic and professional community is enhanced by their contribution to it. All shortlisted applicants for home and EU are asked to attend interview. Overseas applicants may be required to provide material in additional to their portfolio with their applications, or be available for interview via telephone or video telephone.

Applicants whose first language is not English should normally have an IELTS minimum score of 6.5. They are advised to enter the modules offered by the English Language Centre at the beginning of each year in preparation for academic study. If such applicants are accepted on to the MFA in Curating programme they are advised where necessary to attend English language classes to ensure that they have the sufficient skills to complete the work specified in admission requirements.

Aims of the programme

• To achieve professional and academic excellence in the field of curating;
• To foster academic and professional innovation in contemporary curating;
• To build relationships between students and professionals;
• To extend students’ critical and analytical skills;
• To enhance students’ writing skills to professional standards;
• To create academic and professional opportunities for more in-depth study of the relationship between curatorial practice and wider artistic, social, philosophical ideas;
• To build upon innovative teaching practice in the relationship between curating and contemporary ideas;
• To innovate in research concerning the integration of critical studies into the practice of curating and vice versa;
• To extend academic and professional debate about curating;
• To foster interdisciplinarity in the field of curatorial studies;
• To build international connections for and with students, academic research and professional practice.

What you will be expected to achieve
The subject-specific learning outcomes for the programme are informed by the achievement of professional excellence. There are also Learning Outcomes for Full-time Year 1 of the programme since students can graduate with a PG Diploma at this point. The latter Learning Outcomes are guided by the establishing of a professional practice.

Students develop a wide range of transferable qualities and skills necessary for employment in a variety of contexts. The Quality Assurance Agency describes these qualities and skills as effective communications skills, 'the exercise of initiative and personal responsibility, decision-making in complex and unpredictable situations, and the independent learning ability required for continuing professional development'.

FULL-TIME YEAR 1 (AND PART-TIME EQUIVALENT)
The Learning Outcomes for this stage of the programme (Postgraduate Diploma in Curating) are that upon its completion the student should be able to:

FULL-TIME YEAR 2 (AND PART-TIME EQUIVALENT)
The Learning Outcomes for the programme are that upon its completion, the student will be awarded the MFA Curating and should be able to

Knowledge and Understanding

| A1 | demonstrate professional excellence in contemporary curatorial practice; | Curatorial Practice |
| A2 | demonstrate a professional knowledge of international art movements and trends; | Curatorial Practice and Critical Studies |
| A3 | demonstrate expertise in historical debates concerning the development of curatorial practice; | Curatorial Practice and Critical Studies |

Cognitive and Thinking Skills

| B1 | offer new insights in contemporary curating and its relation to critical studies; | Curatorial Practice and Critical Studies |
| B2 | articulate the relationship between conceptual and practical concerns at a level of complexity. | Curatorial Practice and Critical Studies |
| B3 | evaluate critically current research and advanced scholarship in curating; | Curatorial Practice and Critical Studies |
| B4 | generate new hypotheses and insights on developments in curatorial practice; | Curatorial Practice |

Subject Specific Skills and Professional Behaviours and Attitudes

| C1 | articulate an independent critical position with regard to the concerns informing their curatorial practice; | Curatorial Practice and Critical Studies |
| C2 | research and produce curatorial projects of a professional standard in public; | Curatorial Practice and Critical Studies |
| C3 | respond critically to the curatorial and critical concerns of other curators and scholars; | Curatorial Practice and Critical Studies |
| C4 | apply knowledge with original insight into curatorial developments; | Curatorial Practice and Critical Studies |

Transferable Skills

| D1 | demonstrate an ability to carry out original research to a high level; | Curatorial Practice and Critical Studies |
| D2 | work across established disciplinary boundaries in a manner that extends interdisciplinary research and practice | Curatorial Practice and Critical Studies |
| D3 | write critically in a manner that enables the communication of complex critical ideas and their relation to contemporary art | Curatorial Practice |
| D4 | demonstrate advanced organisational skills | Curatorial Practice and Critical Studies |

How you will learn

The acquisition of the outcomes relating to ‘Knowledge and Understanding’ is primarily achieved through an appropriate combination of self-initiated and directed work in both Full-time Year 1 and Full-time year 2 of the programme. This is achieved through the elements of study Curatorial Practice and Critical Studies that are taught by a combination of lectures, seminars, individual tutorials and practical workshops as summarised in the descriptions below.

The acquisition of ‘Skills’ is achieved through individual research, discussion of practice with individual tutors, participation in the group seminars (whose focus changes across the duration of the programme), and also through investigations with a wider focus in the Critical Studies provision as summarised in the Curriculum Maps below.

Full-time Year 1 of MFA in Curating provides a practical and critical basis for students’ independent guided learning and establishes discussion-based modes of teaching and learning. The programme is lecture, seminar and tutorial-led, and students are encouraged to develop original curatorial ideas towards the establishment of a professional practice. They do this through following the mandatory elements of study Curatorial Practice and Critical Studies (see below).

Full-time year 2 of MFA in Curating provides advanced practical and theoretical support for students’ independent guided research and learning. The programme is lecture, seminar and tutorial-led, and students are encouraged to develop original curatorial ideas towards the achievement of professional excellence. They do this through following the mandatory elements of study Curatorial Practice and Critical Studies (see below). In Full-time Year 2 students are expected to be able to initiate their own original research into curatorial practice.

Full details of schedules, writing guidelines and key books are given in the programme handbooks.

FULL-TIME YEAR 1
Curatorial Practice
The element of study Curatorial Practice in Full-time Year 1 is designed to provide support for, give guidance to, and encourage innovation of student-initiated curatorial ideas, their planning and implementation by staff and visiting tutor seminars, student-led seminars and tutorials. The student-directed work on this element leads towards the establishment of their own specific professional practice. This element of study is assessed by the Independent Research Project A (IRP-A).

Curatorial Practice at this stage of the programme is taught in a number of ways:

1. Research Seminars (weekly) help students develop the confidence and ability to discuss their own work and the work of others, and to use the combined knowledge and experience of the group as a primary teaching tool to assist students in understanding and developing their own practice. To this end, this element of the programme is expected to be student-led with tutors responding to the needs and concerns of the participants. Each student presents work for seminar once in each term. In term two, students’ seminar presentation is assessed.

2. Tutorials develop the student’s work as a professional practice within contemporary curating and current debate. Students receive scheduled one-to-one tutorials regarding their practice with their tutors and other visiting staff. Three tutorials a term are scheduled with the core staff and Visiting Tutors of the programme.

3. Histories of Curating seminar (weekly), consisting of seminars presented by programme tutors and visiting tutors, help students locate their developing practice critically within various historical frameworks of curating (see appendix B for indicative bibliography for this seminar).

4. Curating with Fine Art: for the first four weeks of term three of Full-time Year 1 students are asked to curate the work of fellow students in Full-time Year 1 of MFA Fine Art. In teams they produce four public exhibitions which are discussed and critiqued by tutors and invited specialists.

Critical Studies
At this stage of the programme Critical Studies is designed to develop students’ critical awareness of critical and conceptual issues in and around contemporary art through lectures and seminars, and to foster their original and innovative contribution of ideas. This element of study consists of Critical Studies lectures, Critical Studies seminars and Review sessions. The lectures and seminars are designed to firstly develop students’ evaluation skills and secondly their skills at communicating their ideas. This element of study supports and guides the students’ Critical Studies essay, through which it is assessed.

In Full-time year 1 Critical Studies is taught in a number of ways:

1. The Critical Studies Lecture Series introduces and develops issues of critical significance in contemporary culture, art and curating by presenting arguments and discursive frameworks for contemporary practice. Lectures run through the first two terms on a weekly basis. They provide an opportunity for students to critically engage with their own practice in terms of wider cultural debates with which they may be unfamiliar. The lectures also provide an occasion for all members of the postgraduate programmes in the Department of Art to meet on a regular basis.

2. Critical studies seminars (weekly) focus on individual texts by key figures in the development of twentieth century philosophical, aesthetic and social thought and provide students with a detailed analysis of the relationship between such ideas and their influence in current discourse. Seminars are structured as tutor-led reading groups and help focus student ideas for the Critical Studies essay (see appendix B for indicative bibliography for this seminar).

3. Review sessions: students are expected to review four exhibitions or events that they have attended each month in a review session in which groups of students discuss their writing with a tutor. These sessions not only analyse the ideas and opinions expressed in student reviews but focus on writing style and technique.

FULL-TIME YEAR 2

Curatorial Practice
In Full-time Year 2 of the programme the Curatorial Practice element of study provides students with an advanced learning environment in which to advance their professional practice to a level of excellence. Staff and visiting tutors work with individual students to encourage originality and innovation in the field of curating through the critical examination of their and others’ practice and their presentation of the Independent Research Project B (IRP-B) through which the element is assessed. In Full-time Year 2, presentation of the IRP-B is expected to be of an advanced standard in keeping with the professional presentation of a project in public. In this way Curatorial Practice Full-time Year 2 differs from Curatorial Practice in Full-time Year 1, as students are now expected to achieve advanced standards of learning and are encouraged to take responsibility for their ideas with a sophisticated understanding of their professional pathway.

In Full-time Year 2 Curatorial Practice is taught in a number of ways:

1. Contemporary Strategies seminar (weekly) in which students present and discuss examples of contemporary curating that are influential in current debates on exhibition and event-making. Students will be expected to bring evidence in the form of journal and review articles to support their argument, and link their discussion to their Critical Studies element of study (see appendix B for indicative bibliography for this seminar).

2. Research Seminar (weekly) help students develop the ways they discuss their own work and the work of others, and to use the combined knowledge and experience of the group as a primary teaching tool to assist students in understanding and developing their own practice in the Independent Research Project B. This element of study is also designed to hone students’ professional public speaking and presentation skills as well as their ability to work to tight deadlines and respond to questions articulately. This element of the programme is expected to be student-directed with tutors responding to the needs and concerns of the participants. Each student presents work for seminar once in each term. In term two, students’ seminar presentation is assessed.

3. Tutorials develop the student’s work at a level of professional excellence within contemporary curating and current debate. Students receive scheduled one-to-one tutorials regarding their practice in the IRP-B with their tutors and other visiting staff. Three tutorials a term are scheduled with the core staff and Visiting Tutors of the programme.

Critical Studies
The Curriculum for Critical Studies at this stage of the programme is much the same as for Full-time Year 1 (see below). However, all elements of Critical Studies in Full-time Year 2 are designed to be more demanding on the students' practical and critical understanding of advanced concepts of contemporary curating, having established an understanding of 'curating histories' in Full-time Year 1 (or through their previous professional experience). In Full-time Year 2 of the programme, students are expected to work more independently and, where appropriate, to integrate the skills they have attained in Full-time Year 1 Curatorial Practice and Critical Studies skills more fully in their written work, this integration manifesting in the Catalogue Essay.

In Full-time Year 2 Critical Studies is taught in a number of ways:

1. The Critical Studies Lecture Series introduces and develops issues of critical significance in contemporary culture, art and curating by presenting arguments and discursive frameworks for contemporary practice. Lectures run through the first two terms on a weekly basis. They provide an opportunity for students to critically engage with their own practice in terms of wider cultural debates with which they may be unfamiliar. The lectures also provide an occasion for all members of the postgraduate programmes in the Department of Art to meet on a regular basis.

2. Critical studies seminars (weekly) focus on the relationship between contemporary curatorial strategies and texts by key figures in the development of twentieth century philosophical, aesthetic and social thought. The texts for seminars are chosen through discussion between staff and students. Students are expected to demonstrate a well-prepared and advanced understanding of texts chosen. Seminars are structured as tutor-led reading groups and help focus student ideas for the Catalogue Essay (see appendix B for indicative bibliography for this seminar).

3. Review sessions: students are expected to produce a written review of exhibitions or events that they have attended each month in a format suitable to the content of the work (for instance, a summary of a number of different exhibitions or a text that focuses on a particular theme). These are discussed in a group review session with a tutor. These sessions aim to produce publishable material.

Transferable skills are inculcated from the beginning of the programme through the programme elements described above. For example:

- Research seminars develop students' public presentation and communication skills as well as their ability to articulate complex arguments carefully in oral form. Students learn self-evaluation skills from this as well as the ability to analyse and interpret the discussion of their own practice; to assess the strengths of the practice as well as areas for further development; and to find a way forward with the practice and its wider concerns given the consequent alterations to its aims. The skills required here are both subject-specific and transferable.

- Review writing develops and enhances students writing skills, which are critiqued on a regular basis by professional writers. Whilst writing is an essential skill for curators, the development of clear and articulate texts is also transferable. These skills are monitored and developed during this element of the programme and culminate in the Catalogue essay. The writing of these reviews and essays call on the students' managerial and self-evaluative skills.

- Critical Studies enables students to evaluate their own position as curators within a wider context, to understand and interpret complex theoretical ideas presented to them in lecture and seminar form in the Critical Studies essay. The analysis, organisation and interpretation of theoretical material is a transferable skill.

- The independent research projects are developed by students throughout the programme and entail the use of a series of budgeting, marketing, administrative, tactical and fundraising skills to a professional standard. Students must articulate their ideas at a professional level, ensuring practical transferable skills are practiced.

How you will be assessed

Full-time Year 1 and Full-time Year 2 each have two elements of assessment. Students have to pass both elements to complete each Part of the programme.

Students who complete Full-time Year 1 may either progress to Full-time Year 2 of the programme or, if they wish, leave with the award of Postgraduate Diploma in Curating.

Students who complete Full-time Year 2 of the programme are awarded the degree of MFA in Curating. The overall mark is composed of marks from the elements of examination. The contribution of each element is weighted as follows: Critical Studies – 40%, Curatorial Practice 60%

Students on Part-time Year 1 and Part-time Year 3 progress automatically to Part-time Year 2 and Part-time year 4 respectively, taking formative assessments throughout Years 1 and 3.

In order to ensure parity with direct entry students on to Full-time Year 2 (or Part-time equivalent) marks from Full-time year 1 or Part-time Year 2) do not carry forward or contribute to the final classification for Full-time Year 2 (or Part-time Year 4).

Students who successfully complete Full-time Year 1 (or part-time Year 2) and elect to withdraw from the Programme at this stage receive the award of Postgraduate Diploma in Curating.

The levels of attainment and, where appropriate, the quantity of work required for assessment varies according to the assessment point, as detailed below.

FULL-TIME YEAR 1 CURATORIAL PRACTICE

Curatorial Practice in Full-time Year 1 is summatively assessed with the IRP-A by the submitting of a portfolio in July. It is a summative assessment with 100% weighting. In addition, progress towards the IRP-A in the spring term of Full-time Year 1 is monitored by the assessment of a seminar presentation. This latter assessment is formative with 0% weighting.

Formative assessments at the end of autumn and spring terms act as reviews of student’s performance. After the end of each term students receive a report form from the staff team that addresses headings under the criteria for assessment for Curatorial Practice. These also act as a basis for feedback to the student, allowing them to consider their progress on the programme.

IRP-A portfolios must communicate clearly and succinctly details of the form, concept and content of the student’s idea, along with appropriate practical considerations such as a project time frame, budget and, where appropriate, fund-raising strategies. A clear title and project synopsis must be provided and further supporting material must be indexed and labelled.

IRP-A must meet assessment criteria by providing:
A description of the exhibition/project outlining its intentions;
A justification of the rationale for the selection of artists and particular artworks;
A reasoning for the project taking place showing an understanding of its relationship to other curatorial and cultural practices;
A detailed and critical description of artworks, performances, speakers etc.;
Anticipation of the hypothetical or actual stages of the project.

Criteria of assessment: IRP-A

Assessment of IRP-A takes into account the way in which the portfolio demonstrates project development across the year. The following criteria are taken into account:

- Articulation of the student’s understanding of the concerns which motivate their curatorial practice;
- Response to the demands inherent in the student’s curatorial practice;
- Articulation of an artistic context for project;
- Ability to communicate ideas effectively and succinctly in written format;
- Engagement with historical, cultural and conceptual debates pertinent to proposed context. IRP-A seminar presentation

Assessment of the IRP-A seminar presentation takes the following criteria into account:

- Development of understanding of the concerns which motivate the student’s curatorial practice;
- Response to the demands inherent in the student’s curatorial practice;
- Demonstration of a critical context for the student’s own position as a curator at this point in the programme;
- Ability to communicate ideas effectively and succinctly in seminar format.

CRITICAL STUDIES

In Full-time Year 1 Critical Studies is assessed by a written essay of 4,500 words submitted in June. Students are also required to write a draft essay of 2,500 words submitted in March. The draft is formative and has 0% weighting. The essay is summative and has 100% weighting. The Critical Studies essay builds on the Critical Studies element of study and related seminars that students have attended throughout the year and may be an extension of one of these. The essay aims to situate students’ developing curatorial work in a broader critical context, integrating practical and critical issues and referring to examples of curatorial practice that have been thoroughly researched. The essay should utilise a diversity of critical opinions and integrate relevant interdisciplinary material. The subject of the essay must be discussed in advance with regular tutors.

Criteria of assessment

- Clarity of aim: precise question or discussion of a clearly defined topic;
- Relevance of subject matter or approach to essay topic;
- Thoroughness of research in areas that are relevant to chosen topic;
- Clarity of critical position;
- Coherence of presentation;
- Originality of approach;
- Use of primary research and source materials;
- Communication skills;
- Relevance of primary research;
- Relevance of choice of subject, exhibition, artist to contemporary curatorial concerns;
- Relevance of chosen critical framework

FULL-TIME YEAR 2 CURATORIAL PRACTICE

Curatorial Practice is summatively assessed with the IRP-B. Students submit a portfolio in July of Full-time Year 2. This has 100% weighting. In addition, progress towards IRP-B in the spring term of Full-time
Year 2 is monitored by the assessment of an IRP-B seminar presentation. This assessment is formative with 0% weighting.

Formative assessments at the end of autumn and spring terms act as reviews of students’ performance. After the end of each term students receive a report form from the staff team that addresses headings under the criteria for assessment for Curatorial Practice. These also provide the basis for feedback to the student, allowing them to consider their progress on the programme.

Criteria of assessment: IRP-B
In addition to the criteria of assessment outlined for IRP-A in Full-time Year 1, IRP-B should cover the following items where appropriate:

- Rationale for project proposal in contemporary professional context;
- Detailed budget;
- Planning schedules with artists, writers, galleries etc.;
- Installation map;
- Fund-raising strategy;
- Consideration of audience;
- Catalogue prototype (design brief, contents, costs);
- Catalogue essay rationale.

IRP-B seminar presentation
Assessment of the IRP-B seminar presentation will take the following criteria into account:

- Articulation of concerns which motivate the student’s curatorial practice;
- Development of a critical context for the student’s own position as a curator at this point in the programme;
- Development of self-reflexivity;
- Ability to communicate ideas effectively and succinctly in seminar format

CATALOGUE ESSAY
In Full-time Year 2 Critical Studies is assessed by a written catalogue essay of 4,500 words submitted in June. The essay is summative and has 100% weighting. Students are also required to write a draft catalogue essay of 2,500 words submitted in March. The draft is formative and has 0% weighting. The catalogue essay establishes a discourse around and context for students' IRP-B. Part of the task is to decide on the format that the essay should take – there will be times when a traditional catalogue is not the most suitable mode of conveying curatorial and artistic ideas for an exhibition or event and other modes are more appropriate.

The Catalogue Essay, or appropriate format of text, must be written to accompany and contextualise the exhibition or event submitted for assessment for Independent Research Project B. This essay is assessed with regard to the standard of professional excellence for this part of the programme. Its writing is informed by tutorials and students’ regular review writing throughout Full-time Year 2 of the programme.

- Criteria for assessment
- Clarity of description of exhibition, event or other production;
- Contemporary relevance of subject matter or approach;
- Appropriate communication of research;
- Clarity of critical position;
- Coherence of writing;
- Originality of idea;
- Use of primary research and source materials;
Editorial skills

How the programme is structured

The Programme can be attended in full-time attendance or part-time mode throughout. Full-time Year 1 of the MFA (which should also be understood to be equivalent to Part-time Year 1 and 2 unless otherwise specified) enables students to establish a professional practice by achieving a firm sense of direction for their curating and its concerns.

This level of attainment is further developed in Full-time Year 2 of the programme (equivalent to Part-time Years 3 and 4). This stage of the programme enables artists to reflect more rigorously on the curatorial and critical concerns inherent to their practice through individually directed research. Through this, students bring their practice to a level of professional and academic excellence.

In Full-time Year 1, students are introduced to a series of curatorial concepts and practices through group analysis and guided research. In Full-time Year 2, students develop independent curatorial research and practice, working either on their own ideas or with a London-based gallery or institution. The summer term of Full-time Year 1 acts as a transition to Full-time Year 2.

Curators and those in related or parallel positions who have already established a professional practice in the field and wish to develop it to the level of professional and academic excellence, or those who wish to extend their professional experience by developing experimental and innovative approaches to curating, are able to enter the programme directly onto Full-time Year 2. (See ‘Admissions Criteria’ and ‘Programme Structure’.)

Full-time Year 1 of the programme takes an academic year and has a CATS value of 120 (‘credits’). Students may take advantage of an exit point at the end of the first year of the programme and graduate with a Postgraduate Diploma in Curating. This year is therefore also known as the ‘Diploma stage’ of the programme.

On successful completion of Full-time Year 2 the MFA Programme students are awarded the MFA CATS value of 300 (‘credits’). The programme’s structure (‘elements of study’) is the same for each Year of the programme with the exception of the Critical Studies essay (Full-time year 1) and Catalogue essay (Full-time year 2).

The curriculum (the formal structure) is similar for both stages of the programme yet the syllabus and level of expected attainment (the content and purpose of the learning and teaching) is significantly different.

With the exception of the lecture programme, which presents new material every year, and the staff-led seminars (Histories of Curating in Full-time Year 1, Contemporary Strategies in Full-time year 2) the teaching and learning is centred entirely on the student-produced curatorial practice (that is, it is almost wholly constituted of student-centred learning).
The programme structure is summarized by the tables below.

Academic support

The Department recognises the importance of supporting students' learning with high quality teaching that is responsive to their individual and collective needs in tutorials, small group seminars, and lectures. The research seminars, which form the spine of the programme and are outlined above, are structured to develop the students’ critical understanding of their individual practices and its associated concerns over the module of the length of the programme. Tutorials are given to students individually by the core teaching team and other visiting tutors. Feedback for work is also given at the end of every term in the form of a written report with additional tutorial support where this is seen to be necessary.

In addition there are highly skilled technical managers and well-equipped laboratories within the Department that provide technical support for the production of students' work as appropriate to their needs. A comprehensive list of laboratory resources and opening times is published annually.

Students have access to the College Library, Multi-media, Audio-Visual Study resources and Computer Services and Language Resources and these provide a substantial means of supporting other aspects of your learning.
Students' awareness of contemporary art practices and the wider concerns associated with it are broadened beyond the provision of the programme through extra-curricular lectures by outside speakers. Within the Department there is an occasional interdisciplinary lecture series. Students are also encouraged to attend relevant open lectures provided elsewhere in the College, as well as talks offered by the wider network within London's museums, galleries, professional bodies and consultancies and the developing cultural industries. Students are regularly informed in the lecture programme and by email of current exhibitions, events and talks.

Support for learning and wellbeing is provided in number of ways by departments and College support services who work collaboratively to ensure students get the right help to reach their best potential both academically and personally.

Students may be referred to specialist student services by department staff or they may access support services independently. Information about support services is clearly provided on the College Website and for new students through new starter information and induction/Welcome Week. Any support recommendations that are made are agreed with the student and communicated to the department so that adjustments to learning and teaching are able to be implemented at a department level and students can be reassured that arrangements are in place. Opportunities are provided for students to review their support arrangements should their circumstances change. The Inclusion and Learning Support and Wellbeing Teams maintain case loads of students and provide on-going support.

The Careers Service provides central support for skills enhancement, running the Gold Award Scheme and other co-curricular activities that are accredited via the higher education achievement report (HEAR).

The Academic Skills Centre works with academic departments offering bespoke academic literacy sessions. It also provides a programme of academic skills workshops and one-to-one provision throughout the year, which students can access directly at gold.ac.uk/asc/.

Links with employers, placement opportunities and career prospects

MFA in Curating is designed to offer students an understanding and experience of curating that has a breadth of outcomes and a variety of transferable skills in the knowledge that the professional field demands creative and practical flexibility on many levels.

Upon completion of the programme students will be equipped to work professionally in a range of positions including:

- curators in a range of international galleries and museums
- managers and directors in commercial galleries
- independent curators developing their own projects
- cultural policy makers, teachers and academics
- writers and critics
- institutional and independent innovators

Students completing the programme have quickly established themselves as curators of significance in the field of contemporary art practice. Many have gone on to work as curators, directors and managers in museums and galleries across the world. Others have chosen to work as independent curators on a project-to-project basis, establishing influential voices on developing curatorial ideas. Several graduates of the programme proceed to Research-level study in a number of areas including Museology, History of Art, Cultural Studies and Visual Culture, whilst others establish themselves as teachers at graduate and post-graduate level. Several have established reputations as writers on contemporary art, some in journals of national and international status. Upon completion of the MFA programme the majority of graduates continue with the critically informed curatorial practice they have fostered at Goldsmiths and go on to contribute effectively to the development of contemporary curatorial practice in whichever cultural location they are situated. Though these individual and collective undertakings are not as immediately eye-catching as those mentioned above, they are arguably as important since they effect a 'tectonic' change in the concerns and critical competencies of contemporary cultural practice with respect to the cultures in which it takes place and which it addresses.

Students graduating with a Postgraduate Diploma are in a position to enter other recognised taught programmes of international repute. Those choosing not to continue with higher education are well-equipped, through the acquisition of both subject-specific and transferable skills, to pursue their chosen career as practising curators, often in conjunction with other professional activities.

Graduates of the programme also find employment in sectors outside of the subject area. Here, the transferable skills that are required for, and promoted by, the successful completion of the programme - such as analytic, critical, managerial, organisational and communicative competencies – find their value beyond the subject specific concerns in which they are developed.

The requirements of a Goldsmiths degree

All Master’s degrees at Goldsmiths have a minimum value of 180 credits. Programmes are composed of modules which have individual credit values. In order to be eligible for the award of a Master’s degree students must have passed all modules on the programme.

Intermediate Exit Points
Some programmes incorporate intermediate exit points of Postgraduate Certificate and Postgraduate Diploma, which may be awarded on the successful completion of modules to the value of 60 credits or 120 credits respectively. Individual programmes may specify which, if any, combination of courses are required in order to be eligible for the award of these qualifications. The awards are made without classification.

Final Classification
There are four possible categories of final classification for Master’s degrees: Distinction, Merit, Pass and Fail.

For further information, please refer to the Regulations for Postgraduate Taught Students, which may be found here: https://www.gold.ac.uk/governance/studentregulations/

Programme-specific rules and facts

All parts of the programme are mandatory for all students.

Failure of any element of examination requires resitting only that element of examination (in attendance or not, at the discretion of the Board of Examiners).

FULL-TIME YEAR 1
Students on Full-time Year 1 of the programme proceed to Full-time Year 2 by passing both elements of Full-time Year 1. Part One If students take this route assessment Full-time Year 1 carries 0% weighting towards the assessment of the MFA degree in that the marks awarded for this stage are not carried forward to calculate the final classification of the MFA. Students who successfully complete Full-time Year 1 and elect to withdraw from the programme at this stage receive the award of Postgraduate Diploma in Curating.

PART-TIME YEAR 1 AND PART TIME YEAR 3
Students on Part-time Year 1 and Part-time Year 3 progress automatically to Part-time Year 2 and Part-time Year 4 respectively.

PART-TIME YEAR 2
Students on Part-time Year 2 of the programme proceed to Part-time Year 3 by passing both elements of Part-time Year 2. If students take this route assessment Part-time Year 2 carries 0% weighting towards the assessment of the MFA degree in that the marks awarded for this stage are not carried forward to calculate the final classification of the MFA. Students who successfully complete Part-time Year 2 and elect to withdraw from the programme at this stage receive the award of Postgraduate Diploma in Curating.

AWARD OF DEGREE

The degree of MFA in Curating is awarded to students who have successfully passed both elements in Full-time Year 2. Students who have successfully passed both elements of Full-time Year 1 and wish to leave the programme at that point are awarded a PG Diploma in Curating.

The following CATS credits are awarded upon successfully completing and passing each Examinable element:

At the end of Full-time Year 1 (‘Diploma stage’): 120 credits are awarded.
At the end of Full-time Year 2 a further 180 credits are awarded.

Programme costs

General Costs

In addition to your tuition fees, you will be responsible for meeting standard costs associated with your study. Find out more information here: https://www.gold.ac.uk/programme-costs

Specific costs

In addition to these standard costs, you will also be expected to meet some costs which are specifically related to your programme, which are set out below:

Access and support in all of the art practice areas is included in the cost of your tuition fees. However, you are responsible for the providing the materials you choose to work with. A range of materials are available to buy in the practice areas, or you may choose to purchase materials from elsewhere. Reading material is available digitally, however printed copies are available to purchase from the department at less than cost price.

How teaching quality will be monitored

Goldsmiths employs a number of methods to ensure and enhance the quality of learning and teaching on its programmes.

Programmes and modules must be formally approved against national standards and are monitored throughout the year in departmental staff / student forums and through the completion of module evaluation questionnaires. Every programme also has at least one External Examiner who produces an annual report which comments on the standards of awards and student achievement.

This output is considered with other relevant data in the process of Annual Programme Review, to which all programmes are subject, and which aims to identify both good practice and issues which require resolution.

Every six years all programmes within a department are also subject to a broader periodic review. This aims to ensure that they remain current, that the procedures to maintain the standards of the awards are working effectively and the quality of the learning opportunities and information provided to students and applicants is appropriate.

Detailed information on all of these procedures are published on the webpages of the Quality Office (http://www.gold.ac.uk/quality/).
