Dear students,

I am writing to let you know that Goldsmiths University and College Union (GUCU) has announced that its members have voted in favour of the ability to take industrial action.

GUCU is the Goldsmiths branch of the trade union for academic and academic related staff.

At this stage, we don't yet know exactly what action GUCU will take, or when. That's normal, unions are required to ballot their members first and then decide and confirm the specific action.

We are letting you know now because we want to be transparent, and because we have already made plans so that, whatever happens, the impact on your studies is as small as possible.

What do I need to do now?

I recognise that you may find this news unsettling, but there are no actions you need to take.

I will be in touch again when I have more information to share about the industrial action, what it means for you, when it is planned for and how we will support you throughout.

Regular updates will also be published on this webpage. If you have any questions about the information I have shared here, please consult the 'frequently asked questions' section of the webpage in the first instance. You can also contact the Student Hub.

Kind regards,

Jordan Kenny

Director of Student and Academic Services and Academic Registrar
