Richard Hoggart Building

What's in here?

The Departments of Theatre and Performance, History, Visual Cultures, and Music (including purpose-built rehearsal rooms). It's also where you'll find the Student Centre and the Careers Service.

This building was originally a Royal Naval College in the 1800s. Richard Hoggart was a past warden of Goldsmiths, influential in Sociology, English Literature and Cultural Studies.

Student Centre

What happens here?

Staff in the Student Centre help with all aspects of student life. You can get advice on finances, enrolment, housing and assessments by visiting the Student Centre. They also provide wellbeing support, which includes referrals to our confidential counselling service.

The SPACE

What happens here?

This is where the Careers Service is based. They hold workshops, do CV checks and can give 1-1 advice. You can use the service for up to three years after you graduate!

College Green

What happens here?

For many the College Green is the heart of the campus, and on a sunny day it's the perfect place to relax with friends or catch up on your reading. Sports training also takes place on the Green.

We have been a part of the University of London since 1904; benefits of this include access to Senate House Library.

Professor Stuart Hall Building

What's in here?

The Department of Media, Communications and Cultural Studies, and the Institute for Creative and Cultural Entrepreneurship (ICCE), and the Institute of Management Studies (IMS). In all of our media practice areas we have purpose-built facilities that emulate current industry practice, including radio and TV studios, post-production facilities, video and sound editing suites, digital animation facilities, photography studios, and a 120-seat screening room.

If you walk along the side of the Professor Stuart Hall Building, at the corner of College Green you'll find a historic post that marked the boundary between the old Kent and Surrey borders. From this point you can see London's famous 'Gherkin' and 'Shard' buildings in the distance.

Lockwood Building

What's in here?

The Department of Design, including a variety of specialist workshops.

Whitehead Building

What's in here?

The Department of Psychology, the Institute of Management Studies and the Graduate School, as well as one of the largest lecture rooms on the campus - the Ian Gulland Lecture Theatre.

The Whitehead Building was built in 1968 and had a multi-million-pound makeover in 2008.

St James Hatcham

What's in here?

This former church now contains a creative computing lab. It is also used for degree shows and as a performance space. The Department of Computing and the Department of Social, Therapeutic and Community Studies also occupy some of the houses along St James, which contains the Research Office - a resource that nurtures and promotes research activity at Goldsmiths.

Laurie Grove

What's in here?

Nearly all of these terraced houses are a part of Goldsmiths. It's all in a lovely bubble and the one campus creates a fantastic community feel. The houses contain administrative offices for various departments. Laurie Grove Baths was built in 1898 and is a Grade II listed building. It is a unique space for art degree shows and is home to the Centre for Urban and Community Research.

Blur held their first ever gig at our SU. The mural on the side of the building was designed by a former Goldsmiths student.

Students' Union (SU)

What's in here?

A gallery and performance area as well as a bar, café and nightclub. The Union has a regular entertainment programme, from comedy and karaoke to live music and club nights.

More about the SU:

It is run by an elected group of four students who are paid for the year they are in post.

- They host over 100 clubs and societies (anything and everything you might want to get involved in or you can set up your own).
- There's a student-run newspaper, magazine and radio station.
- Academic Representation: all courses have Department Representatives to ensure you get the most out of your time at Goldsmiths.
- The SU bar is open daily during term-time.

Margaret McMillan Building

What's in here?

It houses our Department of Educational Studies. The building was renamed the Margaret McMillan Building following a campaign by students and staff to ensure that the historic contributions of women are more widely recognised at Goldsmiths.

Margaret McMillan was a social reformer, who founded the first open-air nursery school in Deptford in 1914 and set up health clinics to treat poor children.

Curzon

What's in here?

Curzon Goldsmiths is a public cinema open to everyone, screening new releases from major blockbusters, independent gems and foreign language cinema. We also show one-off classics, re-releases and films related to the university's wider academic work. The cinema frequently hosts exclusive Q&As with filmmakers and Goldsmiths experts.

Warmington Tower

What's in here?

Warmington Tower is home to the Departments of English and Creative Writing, Politics and International Relations, and Sociology. It also holds office space for some of our support departments.

Warmington Tower was built in 1969 as a purpose-built halls of residence. It was the first mixed halls at Goldsmiths.

Rutherford Building

What's in here?

Contains the Library, open-access computers (Macs and PCs), study spaces, Assistive Technology Centre, Digital Media Suite, Media Equipment Centre and IT helpdesk. It even has a little café - it is definitely a hub of Goldsmiths life!

Deptford Town Hall Building

What's in here?

Teaching rooms, administrative offices and the old Council Chamber, which is regularly used as a performance venue for music recitals.

Deptford Town Hall's architectural features reflect the area's maritime history, and modern commentators have raised concerns over some of the colonial imagery and its connection to slavery in particular. The debate about how we should present and interpret such controversial symbolism continues.

Loring Hall

What's in here?

This forms one of our halls of residence, and is the closest hall to campus. We have various other accommodation options including halls within a short walk or quick commute of the campus.

Ben Pimlott Building

What's in here?

The Centre for Cognition, Computation and Culture and the Goldsmiths Digital Studios, as well as studio space for students in the Department of Art.

Goldsmiths Centre for Contemporary Art

What's in here?

The newest addition to Goldsmiths' campus is the Goldsmiths Centre for Contemporary Art (CCA). Opened in September 2018, the CCA was designed by Turner Prize winning collective Assemble, and hosts world-class exhibitions by international artists. Formerly a Victorian bathhouse, the CCA aims to engage with students and draw upon the research excellence of the university.

The 'Squiggle' on top of Ben Pimlott Building weighs 27 tonnes and is 534 metres long if stretched out (twice the height of Canary Wharf tower!).
